

from Hiroshima and Nagasaki

GOOD WILL AMBASSADORS

*a group of thirty survivors of the atom bombings from all walks of life
on a world tour
to share with the people of many nations their knowledge of the atomic bomb
and its aftermath
and to exchange ideas and information
in an effort to help the world find ways to achieve disarmament
and abolish war*

In all the world there are perhaps no people so personally and intensely concerned with the prevention of nuclear war as the hibakusha — the “explosion-affected people” of Hiroshima and Nagasaki. Nineteen years ago they experienced a massive disaster, unmatched in human history. This group, unique in the world, is characterized by dedication to the idea that nuclear war must never happen again to anyone anywhere on earth.

This spring thirty hibakusha are touring the United States on the first part of a historic journey around the world, which they hope will take them on to England, France, West and East Berlin, the Soviet Union and mainland China.

These people — doctors, social workers, educators, religious leaders, students, a labor representative, a clerical worker, a nuclear physicist, a housewife and farm worker — want to meet you, the people of the United States, in your homes, in your places of work and study, your clubs and churches and civic organizations, your recreation spots.

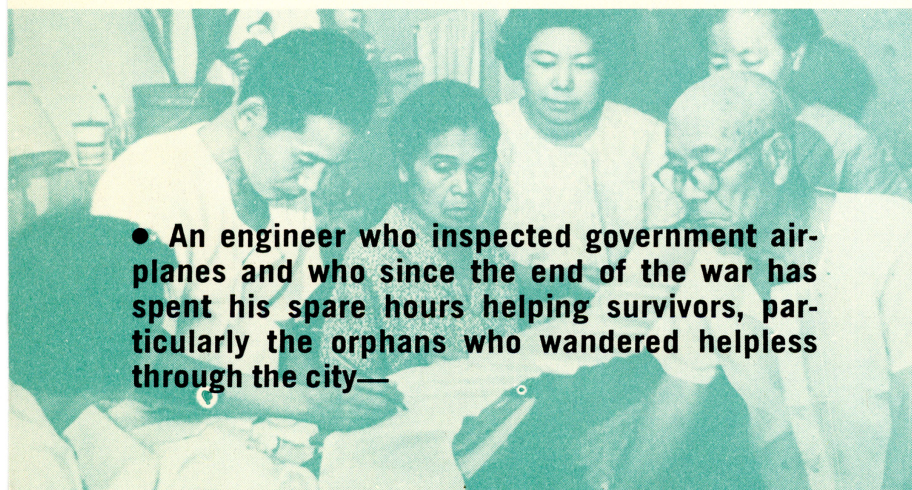

They are the GOOD WILL AMBASSADORS, the delegates of the World Peace Study Mission. They were chosen from among many applicants for their professional qualifications, for their active concern for humanity and their exceptional ability to communicate that concern. None of them is associated with any political grouping; they hope to serve as intermediaries across the political and national barriers which divide men. They want to help to establish the international relationships which will prevent the tragedies of future Hiroshimas and Nagasakis.

They come in a spirit of friendship, without bitterness or hostility, to meet with their counterparts in the professions and with groups of all kinds — civic, religious, educational, labor, peace, business, youth and womens groups — and with the general public. Through exhibits, films, meetings and personal conversations they want to share their special knowledge and to convey what they have learned of the long-range effects of modern war: physical, medical, sociological, psychological, political, economic and spiritual.

They want to inform, and they want to learn. Above all, they want to learn what is being done for world peace. What is the thinking, what are the proposals, what are people doing as individuals, in their jobs, and in their organizations? Can doctors and scientists, teachers and housewives around the globe work together — not to gloss over the conflicts in political thinking and national cultures, but to search out practical ways to resolve the differences, to achieve disarmament and to formulate procedures for peace-keeping in today's complex world?

In preparation for their journey, the delegates, with the help of experts, are making intensive studies of various aspects of international relations.

They will have briefing sessions at the United Nations when they arrive in New York. It has been suggested that the World

• An engineer who inspected government airplanes and who since the end of the war has spent his spare hours helping survivors, particularly the orphans who wandered helpless through the city—

Peace Study Mission be regarded as a pilot project for International Cooperation Year, set for 1965 by the United Nations, and that the delegates' reports be published in several languages and many countries as contributions to International Cooperation Year.

Eleven members of the group speak fluent English. The others, including six who speak some English, are accompanied by skilled, specially trained interpreters, chosen from the student body of Japan International Christian University in a remarkable pioneer experiment in field education. These student companion-interpreters, as they are called, are helpful to the Mission in myriad ways, coping with everything from translation to laundry problems. They will prepare full reports of their experiences during the tour and will receive university credit for their time and work with the Mission.

The hibakusha will be in the United States for six-and-a-half weeks, from April 21st to June 7th.

They are traveling from west to east in three teams, by plane and auto caravan, equipped with films and exhibits. They are visiting more than fifty cities, and making many small town "whistle stops" along their routes.

And so they come to you, and they trust that you will welcome them, talk with them about your own hopes and fears, and take them into your communities and homes.

HOW YOU CAN PARTICIPATE IN THE WORLD PEACE STUDY MISSION

1. If you live in or near one of the areas through which the three teams of the Mission will pass (see Schedules, reverse side) you can help by offering hospitality, by raising funds, by arranging for speaking engagements — public meetings or intimate discussions — by setting up visits to medical, educational and other institutions, by alerting your Mayor and other civic dignitaries, by making arrangements for newspaper, television and radio interviews, and so forth.
2. No matter where you live, you can learn more about the purposes of the World Peace Study Mission, tell people and the press about it, and help to bring the message of its literature and films to others.
3. You can contribute financially towards the expenses of the World Peace Study Mission. The estimated budget for the around-the-world trip for 40 people (including interpreters) is almost $100,000; of this, over half is for transportation costs. Whatever you can give, large or small, will be of help. Contributions thus far range from $1.00 to $5,000. No government, no big corporation, no foundation is paying for this venture of faith. People are supporting it: people and the groups to which they belong.

• An army surgeon who for four years did hundreds of operations on the mangled bodies of civilian victims of war, and is now the head of a large municipal hospital—

• A young woman who at twelve was one of fifty schoolgirls, out of a class of three hundred and fifty, to survive the bombing . . . who still suffers from the injuries she received . . . who plays the harp-like instrument, the koto . . . and whose work as a teacher of blind children is a constant exercise of tenderness—

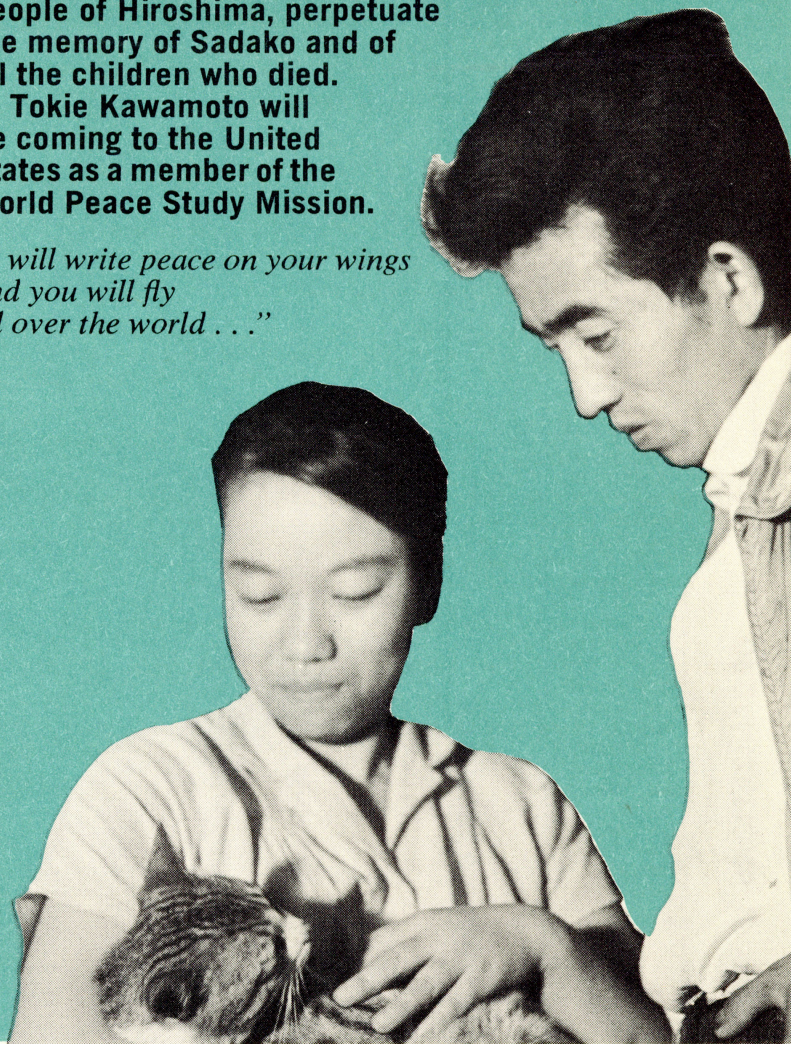

Orizuru, the folded paper crane, has become a symbol of peace in many lands. Traditionally, the crane stood for long life and good fortune; there is a Japanese saying that he who folds a thousand cranes lives a long time.

Sadako Sasai, a little girl of Hiroshima who was two years old when the bomb fell, tried to fold a thousand cranes in her hospital bed when she became a delayed victim of leukemia at the age of 12. She made 964 cranes, and died. Her statue stands atop the Children's Memorial in Hiroshima Peace Park.

Folded Crane Clubs work for and with children, for peace and for the welfare of survivors. The Clubs, Orizuru-Kai, initiated and sponsored by Ichiro and Tokie Kawamoto, hibakusha and working people of Hiroshima, perpetuate the memory of Sadako and of all the children who died.

Tokie Kawamoto will be coming to the United States as a member of the World Peace Study Mission.

*"I will write peace on your wings and you will fly
all over the world . . ."*

- A nuclear physicist who has worked tirelessly to gather and evaluate facts about the physical effects of modern war, at the same time carrying a full college teaching load and writing numerous theses in his field of theoretical physics—

SCHEDULES

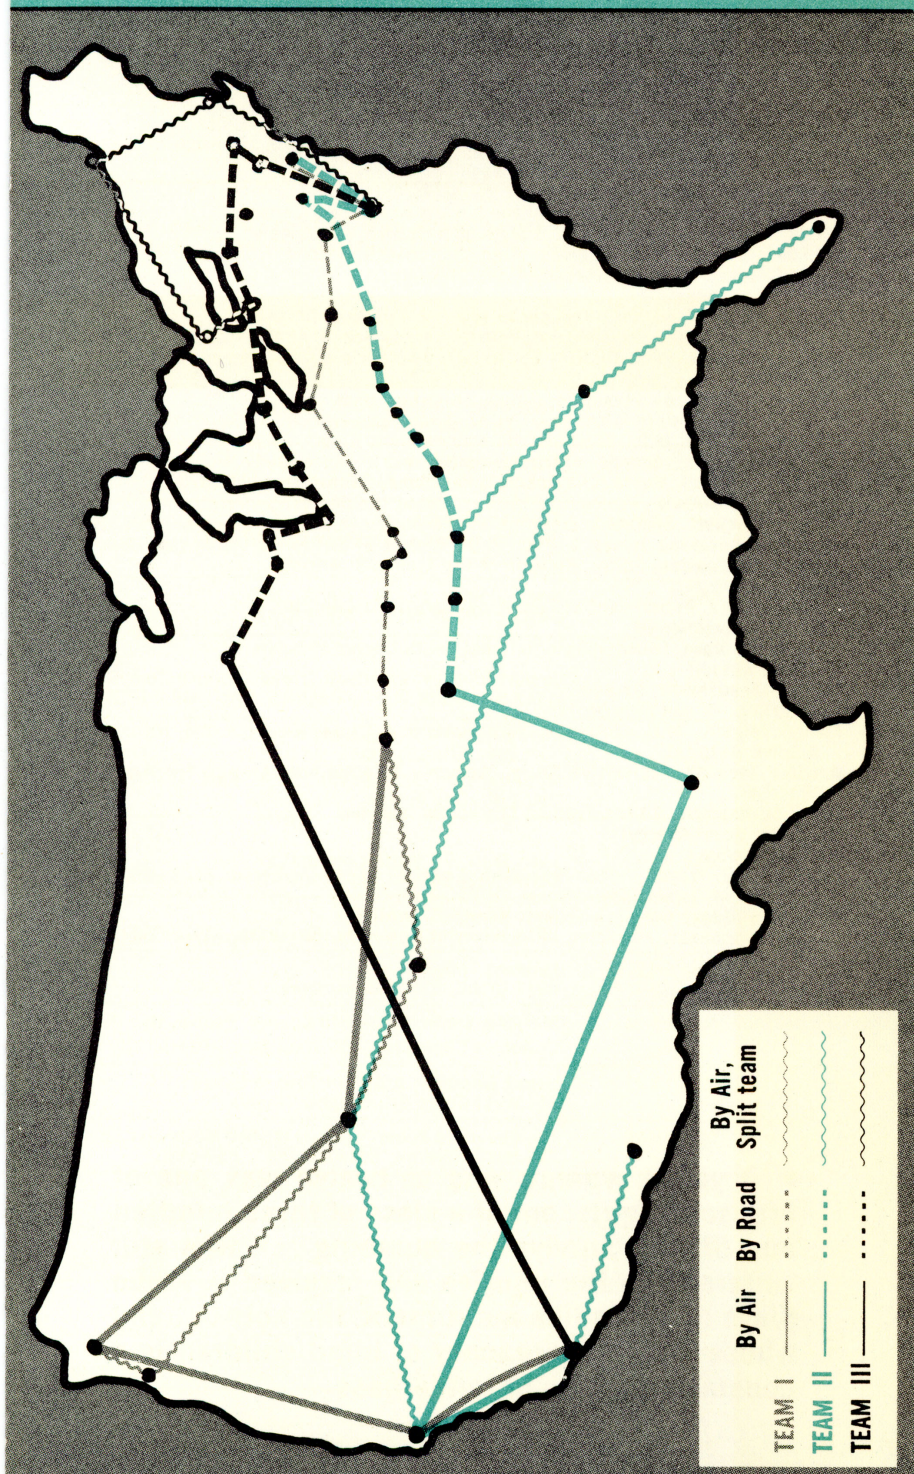

(Still subject to some changes)

NOTE: City names designate AREA CENTERS, out of which team members will cover other towns and cities. Wherever a full day is allowed for driving a short distance, small town stops will be planned along the route; and/or, if the team arrives at the evening stop early enough, a meeting or activity may be scheduled for that evening.

Individual delegates may be available to your area even if not on the Team as scheduled; we will do our best to honor early requests, giving priorities as they come to us, for important meetings for individuals. This also means that one or two such delegates may not be on your area's Team when it arrives, because of commitments elsewhere.

Dr. Takuo Matsumoto, Senior Delegate of the Mission, will not be attached to any one of the three teams, but will divide his time among them. He can be available for important speaking engagements only.
